Paradise Regained.

I loved my love with a deep, deep it Which words could never tell;
I yearned to own my preclous dove,
In bliss with her to drzell.
But when I told her, "I'm too poor
To ask a girl to wed,"
Bhe answered, "Oh, I'm not so sure!"
Then, blushingly, she sald;

"If you love me and I love you
Why longer, then, delay?
Let's find a room that holds but two
And move right in today!
Since happiness is all we wish nce happiness is an We'll get a cosy nest. We'll get a cosy nest. With a folding-bed and a chafing-dish, And Love will do the rest."

Galety seems to have become a habit with help looking ahead a bit and wondering Tuesday euchre and the musicale and ple. whist, for they are already established or will be before the week is over, and everybody knows by this time the power of those diversions to console those who feel bound to eliminate more pretentious dissipation during the forty quiet days. But "sufficient unto the day," etc., and in the meantime society evidently intends to make the most of its opportunities, and when opportunities are not afforded society makes

A number of women prominent in society have pledged their assistance in the effort to establish the name "fruice" for a fruit juice mixture, and so a distinction between such drinks and punch, which, properly speaking, means a drink that includes spirits. This is done at the solicitation of members of the local Women's Christian Temperance union, which found ready co-operation. Punch has long been under a ban in several of the best homes of the city, while more than a dozen men and women of enviable social position not only exclude it from their homes but refuse it when and wherever it is offered them.

In conclusion it says: "This report would not be complete without a reference to Mr. Abram S. Hewitt, upon whose conservative and wise judgment the executive committee relied. It was largely in consequen of the reliance they placed upon his opinion that the women who have been associated together in this work were reluctantly induced to take upon themselves the prompected home this week from a fortnight's inent position and operous duties in con nection with it. It was he who said: 'It is fortunate that woman is now independent its servitude."

The committee appointed by the Woman's club is making an effort that should be supplemented by that of the other women's organizations of the city that have so frequently accepted the club's hospitality in the past, to make Monday's matinee entertainment a success financially as well as socially. The following appeal is sent out to the omen of Nebraska through the Union Worker in behalf of the Women's Christian Temperance Union temple of Chicago:

Are you doing all you can to make February 17 a red-letter day for the temple? This sixth date of the neavenly birinday of Frances E. Willard has been set apart as a standard against which time every dollar of the bonds will be redeemed. We believe there are outstanding about 169,00) worth of bonds. Mrs. Carse has some large gifts to reduce this amount and more in prospect, but the large ones will not do it unless they are re-enforced by the gifts of the humble. Our unions and women have always done nobly. We trust there will be no dininuition in the work just now. When the bonds are disposed of and we own a controlling interest in the stock, with they magnificent rental that is now accruing, the trustees believe that the remainder of the debt can be comfortably managed. However, did they not believe this, did they see defeat before them, they would yet be as unswervingly determined to retire the bonds as they now are, and they would be upheld by every lever of honesty and uprighteoueness. If from each union a subscription paper was circulated, allowing everyone in the community an opportunity to give even the small gifts, what a magnificent sum it would aggregate. Won't you try it?
